Booktalk!

“Hardly anyone noticed young Sally McCabe. She was the smallest girl in the smallest grade.”

No one notices tiny Sally McCabe, but she is “paying super extra special attention” to everything around her—and what she sees is an epidemic of bullying and cruelty in her school. So Sally takes a stand in the lunchroom: “I’m tired of seeing this terrible stuff,” she proclaims, sticking her finger emphatically in the air. “Stop hurting each other! This is enough!” Will Sally be the one to bring change to her school?
