

The Perfect Day

It was the perfect day! Fat wet snowflakes fell nonstop the night before! We woke up to a blanket of snow covering the ground. We patiently waited, huddled by the television for the important announcement—no school today—so that we could bundle up like marshmallow people and trudge through mountains of the white stuff. Will we have another snow day tomorrow? I wonder

Science Center Safety Rules

1. Wear gloves, a long-sleeved shirt, and safety goggles when you do an experiment. Be careful with open flames.
2. Be cautious with sharp tools and dangerous chemicals.
3. Clean up spills, put used paper towels in the trash, and return all supplies where they belong.

Exploring the Cave

We were on our way to our adventure. Dad was smiling; I was quiet as I stared out the window.

"What's more exciting than exploring a cave?" asked Dad.

Honestly, I could think of a lot of things. Caves are dark, damp, and full of bats! But I wanted to be brave.

"You're right, Dad," I stammered. "Let's get our flashlights and go!"

A Visit to Grandma's House

It is the best day of the year—the day I go to Grandma's house! She's always excited to see ME! She lives far away in Peru, so it takes us forever to get there. First, we take a plane. Then there is the bus full of people on the bumpy roads. Forever! Forever! But it's all worth it. Being in the company of Grandma is the best!

All About Me!

My birthday is September 8. I have two siblings: Matt and Mary. My favorite food is Pizza. I have read every book by J. K. Rowling, and I think Tennessee is the best place to visit! I love Baseball. My favorite team to cheer for is the Los Angeles Dodgers.
