

Volume Tracker

In the first column, list the times during the day that your students have an opportunity to read independently (e.g., first thing in the morning, after completing assignments, during independent reading). Enter the names of up to five students whose reading volume you would like to track. During each reading opportunity, enter the approximate number of minutes each of those students spent reading, or write in what they were doing instead. At the bottom of the form, note any relevant observations (e.g., Most students had time to read after finishing the math assignment, but Max needed that time to complete his work).
