

Dear Families,

The following pages contain recipes for how to make a Thanksgiving turkey. Each child was asked in a one-on-one session to give me their best turkey recipe. I would ask some questions to help them finish their recipe if they got quiet for too long but didn't guide them on what to say. I wrote down their recipes word for word. They also typed their own name (including picking the font and size) and found and inserted their own clipart for their recipe.

Bringing your child into the kitchen as you cook is a great way to work on sequencing and beginning, middle, and end (both of these skills are important reading skills).

I am very thankful to be your child's teacher. Each of the students in our room brings something so special and has a unique personality. I can't image our classroom without each and every one of them.

As a final note, I cannot endorse any recipe found in this book but I do endorse all the smiles you will have from reading and sharing the following pages through the years.

I hope you enjoy our Thanksgiving turkey cookbook and cherish it for years to come.

Sincerely,
