

IF YOU gİve a
Dad a DONUT...♥♥♥

Written and Illustrated by the kids in Room _____

If you give a dad a donut, he will want some milk to go with it.

You are out of milk, so he will insist you take him to the store to get some.

On the way to store, he will see a garage sale with lots of sports stuff.

He will want to stop, so you tell him okay
but only if you get to pick something too.

You will pick a basketball and he will pick a weight set.

You will load them in the car and head to the store.

While at the store getting chocolate milk,
dad will run into a friend.

That friend will ask him if he can come over on the way home to help him move a couch.

Dad will agree of course (because he is just that nice) and after buying chocolate milk, you will both stop at the neighbors to help him move a couch.

At the neighbor's house, they are making peanut butter and jelly sandwiches for lunch.

They will offer him a peanut butter and jelly sandwich and he will enjoy it, but realize that he is thirsty.

This makes dad think of the best thing to go with peanut butter and jelly....MILK!

He will kindly ask for a cold glass of milk.

Chances are, if dad has a glass of milk,
he will probably ask for a donut to go with it!.
