Anna, José, and Henry have never met, but they have more in common than they realize. Snowed in together at a chaotic Washington, DC, airport, they encounter a mysterious tattooed man, a flamboyant politician, and a rambunctious poodle named for an ancient king. Even stranger, news stations everywhere have just announced that the famous flag that inspired “The Star-Spangled Banner” has been stolen! Anna, certain that the culprits must be snowed in, too, recruits Henry and José to help find the thieves and bring them to justice.

But when accusations start flying, they soon realize there’s even more than a national treasure at stake. And with unexpected enemies lurking around every corner, will Anna, José, and Henry solve the heist before the flag is lost forever?
How To Play: capturE the flag

Number of players: At least 8

Equipment needed: 2 “flags” (can be handkerchiefs, bandannas, scarves, etc.)

How To Play:

1. Once a play area has been established, players should split into two equal teams and decide on a clear center dividing line.

2. Both teams should place their flag just inside the boundaries on their side. Each team’s flag must always be visible to the other team.

3. Once the game begins, players should attempt to retrieve the other team’s flag and bring it back to their side without getting tagged by their opponents.

4. The first team to capture the opposing team’s flag wins the game.

Rules:

- All players tagged before successfully bringing the flag back to their side are considered captured and must stand in a designated area on the opponent’s side (commonly referred to as the “jail”).

- If a player is captured, the flag is restored to its original place.

- Players may guard their team’s flag, but they must stay outside of a designated “safety zone” surrounding it. The size of this zone will depend on the overall size of the playing area, so players may use their discretion when determining boundaries.

- Players may rescue their imprisoned teammates by tagging them behind enemy lines without getting caught. Rescuers can only save one prisoner at a time, and they cannot attempt to capture the flag in the same run as a rescue. If rescuers are tagged before they can save their teammate, they are also considered captured.

Imagine that you are Jeff Brodie, the curator of the Star-Spangled Banner exhibit at the Smithsonian Museum of American History. Write a letter to the president of the museum requesting additional security to prevent future problems with the flag. In your letter, be sure to include:

- Details about when and how the flag was stolen
- Specific security issues that allowed the theft to happen
- Your recommendations for how the exhibit should be protected in the future

The Common Core Standards encourage students to “Read Like a Detective and Write Like a Reporter.”

With this in mind, pretend you are a newspaper reporter for The Washington Post and you’ve been assigned a front-page story about the theft and recovery of the Star-Spangled Banner. Write the article that you will submit for publication. Be sure to include:

- An attention-grabbing headline
- A lead that gives the most important information first
- The Five Ws—Who, What, When, Where, and Why (and also How!)
- Quotes from people involved
MOCK TRIAL ACTIVITY

Stage a mock trial for the people who stole the flag. Assign the following parts:

Prosecuting Attorney:
This person is responsible for presenting the evidence against the thief or thieves. He or she will give an opening statement, providing an overview of the case and then ask questions of witnesses. At the end, the prosecutor also gives a closing argument, summarizing why the jury should find the person guilty.

Defense Attorney:
This person is responsible for defending the thief or thieves. This person will also give an opening statement, providing an overview of the case from his or her perspective, and then ask questions of witnesses. At the end, the defendant also gives a closing argument, summarizing why the jury should find the person not guilty.

Defendant(s):
These are the people accused of the crime. They may or may not be called as witnesses, but they should work with the defense attorney to try and come up with evidence that will keep them out of jail.

Jury Members:
These people are responsible for listening to the evidence presented and deciding if it proves, beyond a reasonable doubt, that the defendant(s) are guilty of the crime.

Witnesses:
These people are all responsible for telling their own story as it relates to the flag theft and answering questions from the prosecuting and defense attorneys. They may only testify about the events of which they have first-hand knowledge. (For example, someone can’t testify about what happened in the flag chamber unless he or she was there to see or hear what happened.) The following witnesses should be prepared to testify:

- Anna
- Henry
- José
- Mr. McGilligan
- Senator Hobbs
- Sinan
- Sinan’s mother
- Senator Snickerbottom
- Snickerbottom’s security guard, Earl
- Snickerbottom’s security guard, Zeke Skipworth
- Snake-Arm
- Waitress at Pickersgill Diner
- George Malbut, the baggage handler
- Jeff Brodie
- Erma Emma Jones
- Henry’s Aunt Lucinda
- Smithsonian Security Guard Paul Lahue
Kate’s Story Behind Capture the Flag

One of the inspirations for Capture the Flag was a letter I received from a kid named Patrick after I’d visited his school in Vermont to talk about one of my earlier titles. His letter was kind but honest and one of my favorites I’ve ever gotten from a reader:

I’m sorry, but I didn’t really like your book. I like books with a lot of action, and I felt there wasn’t enough. It’s just not my type of book. But if it was, I would have thought it was a great one.

Merry Christmas,
— Patrick

I decided that day I needed to write a book for Patrick and for all the other Patricks of the world, and that was the inspiration for Capture the Flag as well as a couple of my other upcoming books.

When I was researching this book, I realized that if I was going to have a heist from the Smithsonian, I needed a plausible story for how that could happen, so I picked up the phone and called the curator of the Star-Spangled Banner exhibit at the National Museum of American History to ask him how, hypothetically speaking of course, someone might go about stealing his flag. Once he checked me out, he was delighted to help and invited my family to the museum an hour before it opened one day. We spent a delightful morning in the flag exhibit, talking over how one might go about breaking into the enclosure and prowling the Smithsonian’s back hallways and riding the freight elevators to devise a getaway plan for my bad guys.

I also love the other setting of this book—airports. I always have because they’re so full of stories. Everybody in an airport has a story—whether they’re coming or going, whether they’re full of eager anticipation or grief. When my family travels, we make up stories about the people hanging around our gate, so this book was a natural extension of that!
