WHERE'S KOKOPELLI?

Kokopelli is an ancient Native-American Indian figure believed to be, among other things, the mischievous spirit of music and storytelling. Found on cave drawings and pottery that are more than 3,000 years old, Kokopelli (pronounced Coke-a-pelly) now appears throughout the Southwest on jewelry, hats, T-shirts, and more. Look for this magical flute player in the picture below and on your travels in New Mexico.

Hint: Kokopelli is the only one with the flute!
