Hey, Roan, did you join the updated Holobook for this semester?

I was going to link to you but I couldn't find your profile....

Oh, yeah, I didn't yet... I couldn't figure out how to set it up.

And then I figured maybe I didn't really need to.

What? How will you know what's happening? How will you keep in touch with everyone?

I figure I still have my holomail.

Okay, I guess I just can't list you under my "top friends."

I mean, until tomorrow, because that's when I was totally going to set up my new profile!

Oh, great!

What about you, Pasha?

I got this holocron that has all of our textbooks stored on it, plus it tells time, plays music, has a calculator, and gives advice.

Pasha, are those clean socks? Make sure you're washing your robes. Also, don't forget to floss. You should eat more vegetables, too...

My mom programs the advice.

TRIDAY

It's been good to finally catch up with Gaiana and Pasha this week. I think not hanging out with them so much was really what made the summer seem like it was a super-long time. I've been looking forward to pilot training ~~all summer~~ my entire life and now that we're starting training, I find out I still have to wait to do any flying!

The only thing we're doing for the first couple weeks is reading through the Galactic Pilot General Instruction Flight Training Manual and Workbook, which weighs more than our class pet, Voorpee. In fact, it probably weighs more than Egon!

Mr. Garfield says we HAVE to learn EVERYTHING in the book backward and forward before we even step into a flight simulator. That's RIDICULOUS. Reading a book can't give you the feeling of what flying is like! I think you can't understand something unless you really ~~experience~~ experience it. It's not like flight simulators can put us in any actual danger. At least this isn't a super-boring or super-hard class for me, or I'd be even more frustrated. Of course, I have to spend so much time reading the G.P.G.I.F.T.M.A.W. that I haven't come up with any ideas to draw for Ewok Pilot comics for the school paper. A couple people have ~~already~~ already asked if I've drawn any new ones, so I'll try to come up with ideas soon...

THIS IS IMPORTANT!

(Mr. G. thinks EVERYTHING he says is important.)
